

Time Travel to our Childhood?

Sai Sathvik G B (21BEC042)

Seeing this topic, you'd think this is a childish thought; but I promise you this will be fascinating to read through. I don't want to introduce myself, as many of my batchmates are familiar with my name.

Imagine if Doraemon comes to you and says: "Wanna live your childhood again? I'll take you on my time machine!" Won't you be elated? Although he's fictional, I'll give you a chance to think about it; will you say NO to my offer? When I asked my friends during school, they narrated long, never-ending stories and were deeply excited about it. So, I thought of sharing my feelings here; and expect you to get the most entertainment out of it.

First, let's go to the time of birth. We can see ourselves as babies. We see our parents' glowing faces, n the most valuable thing on Earth, and their expectations of their newborn kid. We know that we have not lived up to their expectations, but it's okay.

Second is the time we leave our parents for school. Here we see ourselves and our parents crying, but my journey aims at wiping their tears and consoling them.

Did you want to do the same?The third destination is the time you were about to finish 10th grade. I genuinely feel this is the age when we get to know the real value of friendship, and sweet memories stay with us (not love, as it's never known). I want to live through the beautiful moments of my life till 10th grade again (I didn't mention my 'crush' as it'll be non-existent).

The final destination is the time when we were preparing for the JEE, our dream examination. I would motivate myself to try getting into an IIT (I'm satisfied with the extra 'I' I got now) And also, I didn't put in enough efforts. Now that I'm into IIIT Dharwad. my parents are happy. Not getting into any of these could shatter them.

If now Doraemon says: "You really used the time given to you wisely. Why not go for a trip to your future also? I'll pick you up when I come next." So, are you ready to embark on this new journey with me? We have to be confident and strong enough to accept the future as it unfolds. With this confidence and strength, let's wait for the next Doraemon's visit, forget the past and enjoy the present.
